Weekly Prayer Focus

Israel was dependent upon the prophets of the Lord in the Old Testament to instruct the people concerning the will of God. The problem that arose were those who supposedly spoke for God but did not. The obvious test to discover if a prophecy was from God is if it aligned with God's Word, but often the monarch would reward those who prophesied good messages and punish those who did not. If there are two messages, then one should realize they are not equal as one originates with man and the other with God. This situation between the two prophets should cause the modern church to realize there are two types of spirits at work today. There is the spirit that is at work of the sons of disobedience and the Spirit of God at work in the children of God. We should not be like the kings of the Old Testament who only heeded the message they wanted to hear, but we should seek out the voice of one who is led by the Spirit of God. Doing this is not always pleasant but it is eternally rewarding. Let us seek out the Lord and listen to his voice as he leads us in holiness.
